

Christopher McGregor

Flight Safety Officer & Quality

Christopher McGregor started his career in 1992 with Rolls-Royce.

With a background in engineering development and customer support he then joined BAE Systems Regional Aircraft in 1999.

Christopher's career in customer support continued with Airbus from 2003.

He joined the Airbus Flight Safety Department in 2008, becoming Head of Accident/Incident Investigation in 2010.

In his last position as Senior Director, Airbus Customer Services Programs, Christopher was tasked with lead-time reduction and operational reliability projects.

In March 2015, Christopher McGregor is appointed as Flight Safety Officer of ATR.

In June 2021, he was appointed Flight Safety Officer & Quality of ATR.

Christopher McGregor is a Fellow of the Royal Aeronautical Society (FRAeS). He graduated from Heriot-Watt University, Edinburgh, Scotland.

In charge of:

- Central Quality for ATR
- The development and implementation of the Flight Safety strategy within ATR
- Leading the Flight Safety Board
- Responding to ICAO annex 13 investigations
- The promotion of flight safety initiatives within our customer community, aviation authorities and safety forums
- Safety communications to airlines and lessors